

Thought for the day – Monday 25th October 2021

Bible Sunday and the Bible

I like reading detective stories, especially Maigret, and Rebus and Poirot and Marple, Sherlock Holmes and many others. Look out for the Aberystwyth mysteries and Doctor Bartholomew. But then I like fairy stories and biographies and jokes and books about the Bible. Poetry can be fun and picture books are great – I have lots of Asterix, oh and so many more.

The good thing is that reading the Bible there are so many varieties of literature in it. There is something for everybody to enjoy, to learn from, and to change lives; and to be shocked by.

There are tears and laughter.

I have been reading a book by Krish Kandiah, called Route 66, it takes us on a journey through the 66 books of the Bible. (I am looking forward to finishing it.)

There are a multitude of books written about the Bible.

Within the Bible you can find love stories, histories, poetry, prophecy, prayers, detective stories, war stories, spy stories, horror stories and much more.

There is so much to discuss and as Kit says in the Bible and especially the Gospels we can come face to face with Jesus Christ.

May we all be blessed in reading the bible.
